Private Health Clinic Refurbishment

Background

Location: Manchester

Project Value: £200,000

Site Size: 300m²

Duration: 6 weeks

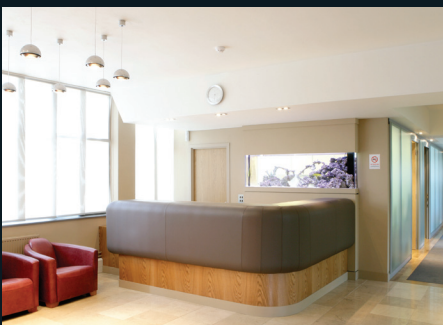

Doctorcall Occupational Health Ltd selected Sudlows to refurbish the top floor of a large commercial property in Manchester, to transform the space into a private health clinic, a specialist service integrating all of the latest medical technology and state-of-the-art furnishings.

The project

In order to understand the impact of medical aesthetics on the clinic, Sudlows worked closely with architects to construct and create an adaptable concept for the refurbishment project.

A fully-glazed Komfire glass partitioning system was installed as a stylish and flexible choice to complement the interior's minimalist and open-plan space. This attractive aquamarine separation provides enhanced privacy to the renovation, distinctly dividing the waiting area from the consultation and treatment rooms and allowing light to transfer throughout.

The soft pendant light fittings in the reception area continue this theme. By adding subtle decoration to the rooms, these suspended dropdown bulkheads punctuate the tones and textures of the upholstered leather furnishings creating a comforting atmosphere.

This modern interior is further emphasised by a built-in saltwater aquarium, which illuminates the serene healthcare environment as a wall mounted centrepiece. It incorporates a professional filtration system installed by a specialist structural engineer, which alone cost in excess of £10,000.

The colour scheme was also carefully chosen for maximum impact; the subtle neutral wall shades contrast against both the scarlet and jet black curved armchairs and the strategically placed charcoal painted walls to create an overall effortlessly modern atmosphere.

Shaun Proudfoot, Building Services Manager at Sudlows added,

"We took the time to understand the function of the company and by initial collaboration with the interior designers we could plan and install a top-of-the-range design package rooted in strong building strategies that are rational and clear to use."

The conclusion

The transformation of this city centre property into a highly successful private medical clinic is a testament to the craftsmanship of the builder and fitters of Sudlows.

Gary McPherson, Consultant for Doctorcall Occupational Health Ltd;

"Sudlows have pushed the boundaries of traditional healthcare building design to balance craft with a space dedicated to offering an excellent GP service for individuals and corporate clients alike. We are overwhelmed by their great approach to this renovation project."
